DETAILED ACTION

Allowable Subject Matter

Claims 1-23 are allowed. The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for allowance: What is meant by "object"? This was the question in the previous Office Action. As amended, the term does not seem to be very different from the specification. As noted in the specification (especially at pages 1-3), the object refers to a method of storing data in a flash memory block. In the sense of the claims of this application, the only the flash memory is referred when the terms object or memory are used. The prior art did not teach or suggest the particular features of the claims.
